

Strip Poker Opens It's Online Community

Thursday, 31 January 2008

Strip Poker Mens Club announced today it's intent on building an online Strip Poker Community. Launching the Community Builder product as a means of obtaining more detailed customer information to enable grouping of it's free registered members and allowing them to communicate freely amongst each other.

The community aspect is just another stepping stone in their soon to be released strip poker product, guaranteed to be unique from any other product on the market today and built not only to attract a strip poker following, but also avid poker players.

The owner continued to say, "we want to build the best online adult community out there, to have a product unique from our competitors and yet, not necessarily striving to compete with their established market. The product due to be released by March is something that we believe will have have an impact of a different kind and will be popular amongst a very wide audience, unfortunately we have to remain very tight-lipped about what that final product will be".

Strip Poker Mens Club will still offer a free gaming environment to it's registered members, however it's latest product will be a combination of subscription-based models to enable continued development of it's product and a range of free services to the majority of it's visitors and registered members.

All current website subscribers will be encouraged to update their profiles, with images and other relevant information in preparation for it's upcoming product launch.
